MESSAGE FROM PSSI'S CO-FOUNDERS

We are pleased to report that PSSI came of age in 2007. From modest beginnings some seven years ago, the Institute has evolved into a security policy and studies hub for the Czech Republic and the region. It has successfully leveraged its rigorous Security Scholars program into a PSSI-sponsored Masters Degree Program in Security Studies offered at the prestigious Charles University in Prague. In its first academic year (commencing September 2007) it attracted some thirty of the University's most talented students specializing in international affairs. We envision obtaining English language accreditation for the MA degree program and accepting English-speaking foreign students by the fall of 2009. We likewise intend to help construct a PhD program in Security Studies in the near-term.

The Institute continues to convene world-class conferences, roundtables and symposia on a variety of cutting-edge security policy issues. In 2007 PSSI brought to Prague for its annual conference an impressive array of leading dissidents from all over the world for vibrant discussions on the important nexus between democracy and security. The keynote address at this conference held under the auspices of former President Václav Havel and Minister of Foreign Affairs Karel Schwarzenberg was delivered by the President of the United States, George W. Bush. Our upcoming 2008 annual conference will focus on the security challenges confronting the Asia-Pacific region and how they could impact on Europe and the Atlantic Alliance. Our partnership with NATO continues to flourish and 2007 saw the completion of our third consecutive NATO Summer School in Telč.

PSSI's Outreach Program became more institutionalized in 2007 and convened one-week intensive sessions with participants from Moldova, Kosovo as well as from the US. We are also configuring the Institute's Corporate Council Program so that it can secure the active participation of leading corporate executives in the Institute's academic, research and other policy-related pursuits. Finally, 2007 was the first full year of operations of PSSI Washington, our affiliate organization in the United States, the first of its kind in the Czech non-governmental security policy community.

As PSSI's Co-Founders, we are especially grateful to our donors, both individual and institutional, for their belief in the Institute's mission and their steady and generous support for the expansion of our key programs. In closing, we remain confident that PSSI will continue to occupy an important niche in the global foreign policy and security debate, particularly in the post-communist space. We will also continue to assume leadership positions in our select areas of expertise. We welcome your interest in the Institute and invite you to join us as we seek to consolidate our capability to equip and train future generations of security policy practitioners.

ROBINSON-MARTIN SECURITY SCHOLARS PROGRAM (RMSSP)

PSSI launched its Security Scholars Program in 2002, seeking to fill the void with respect to security studies courses at major Czech universities. Similar to past years, in 2007, the Institute successfully enrolled seventeen top students to participate in our two-semester Security Scholars Program.

The Security Scholars Program is presently comprised of a series of lectures and seminars led by a distinguished list of senior former and current policy professionals from the Czech Republic and other countries who are experts in their respective fields. The content and sequencing of over twenty lectures on PSSI premises each academic year are coordinated by PSSI Executive Director Oldřich Černý. Reading lists and written assignments accompany the lecture topics. Our Security Scholars Program differentiates itself in a number of ways including providing our students with direct access to international policy luminaries in small group settings.

Among the distinguished lecturers engaged in the Institute's "Security Debates" in 2007 were Jiří Šedivý, former Czech Minister of Defense; Henry Plater Zyberk, Senior Analyst from the Defense Academy of the United Kingdom; Cameron Munter, US Ambassador to Serbia; Vojtěch Cepl, Justice of the Czech Constitutional Court (ret.), and Petr Zeman, former Director of Czech Intelligence.

MA DEGREE PROGRAM IN SECURITY STUDIES AT CHARLES UNIVERSITY

As part of its Security Scholars Program, PSSI-sponsored a Master's Degree program in Security Studies at the prestigious Charles University which commenced in October 2007. More than 100 students applied for the first semester of the program and 30 were accepted. The curriculum of this program seeks to cover the full spectrum of Security Studies and provide students with solid theoretical training as well as detailed knowledge about the crucial security challenges of our time (e.g. terrorism, proliferation, energy security, etc.).

The lecturers concentrate on not only Europe, Russia and North America, but also on the Middle East and East Asia. PSSI will continue to coordinate closely with the Charles University with a view toward making the Program even more beneficial to its present and prospective students. For example, PSSI intends to share a broad array of its distinguished guest lecturers from the global security and foreign policy communities and academia, with those students accepted by the Charles University MA program as well as other university audiences. PSSI is likewise pursuing the English language accreditation of the Masters Degree program so that English-speaking foreign students can enroll in this new Charles University degree program.

The special relationship between PSSI and Charles University would not have been possible without the generous support of Dr. James Q. Whitaker and other Institute donors. The successful accreditation of the Program by the Czech Ministry of Education represented a major new dimension to PSSI's Security Scholars program. The James Q. Whitaker Chair in Security Studies at the University is a testament to Dr. Whitaker's visionary commitment to this educational undertaking.

SECURITY SCHOLARS PROGRAM ALUMNI

Anna Kacerovská

Anna Kacerovská is an alumnus of the PSSI's Security Scholars Program of 2006. Currently, she is enrolled in a Master's Degree Program at the United Nations-mandated University for Peace in Costa Rica in the field of Environmental Security and Peace. The Institute provided Anna with funding support to help make her post-graduate studies feasible. Anna's research interest lies in water-related issues, especially as they affect the politics, stability, development of both industrialized democracies and developing countries. Her Master's thesis will address the challenges of water management in the Tigris-Euphrates basin and offer possible incentives for cooperation in this turbulent region.

Jan Havránek

Jan Havránek is currently pursuing a Masters Degree at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University with funding arranged by PSSI as well as scholarship grants. Inspired by PSSI's 2004 and 2005 annual conferences on Energy Security and Business Security, respectively,

Jan is focusing on security studies and international business relations. His coursework includes counterproliferation, crisis management, technology transfers, corporate finance, counter-terrorism and energy security. His thesis will focus on private-public partnerships with regard to counter-terrorism in the financial and energy sectors. Prior to coming to Fletcher, Jan served as PSSI's Program Coordinator, working on annual conferences, summer schools and field trips to NATO. He also co-founded the Czech Model NATO and participated in numerous transatlantic networking events, including the Young Leaders Forums during the Riga (2006) and Bucharest (2008) NATO summits.

Poland, Belarus, Lithuania, Slovakia and the Czech Republic. The main topics of the program were NATO policies, the energy security, terrorism and strategic defense systems. Among the senior lecturers were: Petr Luňák, NATO Public Diplomacy Division, Václav Bartuška, Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Andrej Nosko, Central European University in Hungary, Vít Střítecký, Charles University, Tomáš Karásek, Charles University and Petr Suchý, Masaryk University. The course achieved its goal of providing detailed analyses of key global security challenges and provided the participants with relaxed, small-setting forums to interact with current and former policy practitioners.

PSSI'S NATO SUMMER SCHOOL

The third annual PSSI Summer School, held from September 10–13 in Telč, Czech Republic, was dedicated to “Security Challenges in XXI Century”. The program, sponsored by NATO's Public Diplomacy Division, offered an opportunity for Czech and international graduate students to discuss breaking security issues with Czech government officials and lecturers from leading universities and think tanks. The Summer School has become one of PSSI's best known traditions. The 2007 summer course was attended by twenty highly qualified students of political science, international relations and other related disciplines. The participants represented a number of countries including Georgia, Pakistan, Ukraine, Moldova, Russia, Romania,

PROGRAM OF ATLANTIC SECURITY STUDIES

DEMOCRACY AND SECURITY CONFERENCE

The Democracy and Security Conference, convened in Prague on June 5–6, 2007, provided a platform for more than 150 dissidents, opposition leaders, policy-makers, academics, business executives, journalists and public policy experts from Europe, Russia, the US, Asia and the Middle East. The keynote speaker of the conference was George W. Bush, President of the United States. He delivered a strong address summarizing American efforts to advance democracy and freedom and reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to combat “repression and radicalism”.

The conference was a joint initiative of three long-time champions of human rights, democracy and liberty: former Czech President and leader of the “Velvet Revolution,” Václav Havel; human rights activist, author and Israeli political leader, Natan Sharansky; and former Spanish Prime Minister José María Aznar. The conference was held under the auspices of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic, Karel Schwarzenberg, and featured such speakers as the Estonian President Toomas Hendrik Ilves, US Senator Joseph Lieberman, Russian opposition leader Garri Kasparov, former Canadian Minister of Justice Irwin Cotler, Chairman of Freedom House Peter Ackerman, and Josef Joffe, the editor of Die Zeit.

The conference culminated in a roundtable discussion, hosted by José María Aznar, Václav Havel and Natan Sharansky, about the vital role of dissidents and freedom fighters in repressive societies. The speakers, which included Bassem Eid, Kanan Makiya, Mohsen Sazegara, Mudawi Ibrahim Adam, Junning Liu, Eli Khoury, Zainab Al-Suwajj, Ludmila Alexeeva, were in agreement that considerably more support for dissidents across the globe is urgently needed. The consensus was that this should include more active assistance to non-governmental organizations in fledgling democracies. In the course of the discussion, Václav Havel also criticized the EU’s present appeasement policy towards Cuba. In his closing remarks, Natan Sharansky underlined how remarkable it was that principled people of such different backgrounds and cultures could gather in complete harmony with a single purpose. He concluded that the common denominator permitting this level of harmony and consensus was a love of freedom and the willingness to sacrifice greatly to achieve it. A summary document, entitled “Prague Charter”, was accepted by the distinguished attendees and has been widely disseminated.

PRAGUE SECURITY STUDIES INSTITUTE WASHINGTON

In the fall of 2006, the Prague Security Studies Institute Washington (PSSI Washington) was established in Washington DC, with a mission to strengthen US understanding of the security challenges facing the Czech Republic and other post-communist states. It likewise seeks to enrich the public policy debate on both sides of the Atlantic with respect to the connectivity between transatlantic security issues and the security risks in other areas of the world. PSSI Washington seeks to help communicate, explain and predict US policy perceptions and options concerning key global flash points.

The Institute also encourages continued and active US engagement with the Central European region, especially in light of a resurgent and more belligerent Russia. PSSI Washington also possesses a strong commitment to East Asian security issues and how they are increasingly shaping the transatlantic partnership. This latter issue portfolio includes tracking and analyzing East Asian security-related involvements in various theaters of the world (e.g. North America, Europe, the Middle East, Africa and Latin America). PSSI Washington will continue to convene periodic, co-sponsored conferences and roundtables and fulfill its role as the first Czech non-governmental security policy organization to establish a presence in the United States.

CONFERENCE ON MISSILE DEFENSE IN EUROPE

PSSI Washington co-sponsored its first event since its opening on the prospects and challenges of missile defense in Europe. The event took place in Washington on April 19, 2007. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Karel Schwarzenberg, opened this event with a lucid explanation of the official Czech position on this matter. Other distinguished speakers included Robert G. Joseph, former Under Secretary, Arms Control and International Security, U.S. Department of State; Daniel Fried, Assistant Secretary of State for Europe; Brigadier General Patrick O'Reilly, Deputy Director, Missile Defense Agency; Ellen Tauscher, Chair, Subcommittee on Strategic Forces, House Armed Services Committee; Petr Kolář, Czech Ambassador to the US; Dr. Andrzej Karkoszka, former Polish State Secretary for Defense and Director of the Strategic Defense Review and Robert Bell, former Assistant Secretary General of NATO. The conference program entitled "Third Site: Missile Defense in Europe" was co-sponsored by the Atlantic Council of the United States.

VISEGRÁD GROUP AND THE EU'S REGIONAL POLICY

This project, entitled “Strengthening Central European Contribution to the Eastern Dimension of EU’s Foreign Policy” was launched in November 2006 by PSSI in cooperation with the Center for International Relations (CIR) in Warsaw, the Research Centre of the Slovak Foreign Policy Association (SFPA) in Bratislava and the Center for EU Enlargement Studies at Central European University in Budapest. It is supported by the International Visegrád Fund and the German Marshall Fund of the United States.

The principal aim of this three-year project is to encourage new thinking in the public and expert debates in Visegrád countries concerning the Eastern dimension of EU policy. It also seeks to increase and sustain a more prominent role for the Visegrád countries in shaping the political agenda of the European Commission, the European Parliament, member states and other actors. Project organizers will build on the EU’s Common Foreign and Security Policy and the Eastern aspect of the European Neighbourhood Policy.

After 2004 enlargement, the new EU members have begun to shape EU policies towards the East and the Balkans. The EU has developed a variety of policy tools to advance this process, including the accession negotiation framework, Cooperation and Partnership Agreements (CPAs) and the European Neighborhood Policy. In recent years, the EU and U.S. policies towards Ukraine, Belarus, Georgia and Moldova have been a subject of intense consultations and a vibrant debate across the Atlantic.

The framework of the project consists of a series of high-level annual policy conferences in 2006–2008 (i.e. Bratislava, Warsaw and Budapest, respectively) and bi-annual policy seminars to communicate recommendations to EU institutions, including the publication of policy papers.

Finally, the project provides a platform for think-tanks, NGOs and policy practitioners to forge common positions and prepare policy papers and joint policy briefs to generate viable policy recommendations for both the EU and national institutions. It also provides a forum for European decision-makers concerning the Eastern dimension of the EU Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) and scenarios for enlargement, relations with Russia, common EU energy policy, migration, visa regimes and the implications of the Schengen system.

VISEGRÁD GROUP EVENTS

The Research Centre of the Slovak Foreign Policy Association hosted the first conference of the project, entitled “Strategic Framework for the EU’s Eastern Policy: In a Search for New Approach”, which took place in Bratislava on November 9–12, 2006.

The second annual conference, entitled “EU’s Eastern Policy – Challenges and Opportunities”, was held on September 24–25, 2007. It was organized by the Center for International Relations in Warsaw. The third conference will be held in Budapest in 2008 at the Central European University. A series of seminars and policy dinners were held bi-annually in Brussels aimed at communicating Visegrád policy discussions with the current Presidency, representatives of EU institutions and other policy-makers, as well as Brussels-based NGOs and media.

A seminar entitled “EU’s Eastern Policy: What Role for Central Europe?” convened on January 25, 2007, was the first such event organized in Brussels. The opening address was delivered by Karel Schwarzenberg, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic. Dr Ronald Asmus, Director of the Transatlantic Center of The German Marshall Fund of the United States, chaired the panel. A second Brussels-based seminar, dedicated to “The EU’s Eastern Policy after German Presidency”, was held on June 20, 2007. The panel discussion was introduced by a keynote speech by Mikuláš Dzurinda, former Prime Minister of Slovakia. In October 2007, Jiří Schneider, Program Director of the Prague Security Studies Institute, and Alexander Duleba, Research Director, Slovak Foreign Policy Association, presented project findings at a seminar “EU and U.S. Policy towards Eastern Europe: A Joint or Separate Approach?” which was organized by the German Marshall Fund of the United States, in Washington, DC.

On October 16, 2007, a roundtable entitled “Deepening the European Neighbourhood Policy: Views from the Visegrád Countries and Germany” was held in Berlin in cooperation with the Stiftung Wissenschaft und Politik Berlin. It featured representatives of the four Visegrád public policy groups as well as representatives of the German foreign policy community.

To further promote the project among Czech stakeholders and involve new target groups, including representatives of business associations, PSSI has organized a roundtable on “Economic Interests and the EU Neighbourhood Policy: Challenges for the Czech EU Presidency?” which was held on December 6, 2007 in Prague. The keynote speaker was Alexandr Vondra, Deputy Prime Minister for European Affairs. The event also featured Petr Pudil, CEO, Czech Coal, representing the Confederation of Industry of the Czech Republic, Václav Petříček, Chamber for Commercial Relations with the CIS, and economic experts from both Poland and Ukraine.

SPECIAL EVENTS

AMIN TARZI AT PSSI

On March 27, 2008 PSSI organized a roundtable on current security developments in Afghanistan with RFE/RL Regional Analyst Amin Tarzi. Dr. Tarzi is a renowned expert on the Middle East and South/Central Asia regions and provided the participants with an indepth analysis of the US and NATO military operations and reconstruction efforts in Afghanistan. He called for the greater involvement of NATO member countries in both areas to bolster Afghanistan prospects for constructing a durable democracy in a peaceful environment.

VLADIMIR MILOV AT PSSI

In April 2007, the Prague Security Studies Institute, together with the Association for International Affairs, organized a Prague visit for Mr. Vladimir Milov former Deputy Energy Minister of the Russian Federation and the current President of the Moscow-based Institute of Energy Policy. Mr. Milov is a renowned energy strategist in Russia, including infrastructure development and regulatory policy. He played leading roles in the development of Russian natural gas, electricity and railway sector reforms, and other important topics. During his stay in Prague on April 12–13, Mr. Milov participated in several expert-level meetings. Mr. Milov also took part in the public discussion on “The Role of Russia in European Energy Policy” at the CERGE Institute with Mr. Václav Bartuška, Ambassador-at-Large for Energy Security of the Czech Republic.

PSSI HONORED WITH 2007 TEMPLETON FREEDOM AWARD FOR STUDENT OUTREACH

On April 24, 2007, PSSI was among the privileged recipients of the 2007 Templeton Freedom Award. The Institute won the award in the category of Student Outreach primarily because of its unique and growing relationship with the prestigious Charles University in the field of Security Studies. PSSI was also recognized as a regional hub for the education and training of new generations of security policy practitioners in this critical discipline. The occasion of the award was the 7th Annual Atlas Liberty Forum held in Philadelphia under the auspices of the Atlas Economic Research Foundation. The Atlas Foundation also administers the Templeton Freedom Awards and Prizes named after Sir John Templeton, the noted philanthropist and financial luminary. Along with this honor was a grant to PSSI from the Templeton Foundation, via the Atlas Economic Research Foundation. PSSI Executive Director and Co-Founder Oldřich Černý, received the award on behalf of the Institute. Also attending the ceremony was PSSI's other Co-Founder, Roger Robinson, and Jana Košárková, assisting PSSI's affiliated Washington office.

CHAIRMAN OF THE U.S. NUCLEAR REGULATORY COMMISSION AT PSSI

On September 14, PSSI hosted an expert roundtable on "Nuclear Energy Security in an Age of Uncertainty" with a special guest, Dr. Dale Klein, the Chairman of the US Nuclear Regulatory Commission. Dr. Klein addressed several challenges facing the nuclear energy sector in the coming years. The revival of nuclear energy in recent years will likely continue due to security, cost, efficiency and other considerations. In the United States alone there are currently plans to build over thirty new nuclear power facilities with an expected lifetime of approximately sixty years. Dr. Klein pointed out, however, that there are a number of difficulties associated with such growing demand for nuclear power. Shortages of capable human resources and the components needed for the building process might prove to be bottlenecks in the future. The process of training new experts is costly and takes up to two years, forcing companies to compete for each newly trained individual. Dr. Klein emphasized that despite the boom in nuclear energy, the United States will continue to diversify its energy supplies. In the discussion that followed, Dr. Klein expressed his concerns related to nuclear proliferation and smuggling of nuclear materials. He pointed to the case of infamous A. Q. Khan, who helped several authoritarian regimes to gain the know-how, technology and equipment needed for activities proscribed by the Non-Proliferation Treaty.

PSSI-SPONSORED TRIP TO TAIPEI FOR CZECH SCHOLAR

One of PSSI's central missions is the education and training of young professionals in the Czech Republic in the field of Security Studies. To advance this goal, PSSI sponsored, together with the Taipei Economic and Cultural Office in Prague (TECO), a one-week visit to Taipei by Ivana Oklešt'ková, a PhD candidate in Asian Studies at Charles University. Ivana is responsible for teaching a course on the security dimensions of the Asia-Pacific region entitled "Taiwan Strait – Possible Scenarios of Conflict". Given this background, an opportunity to meet with colleagues and policy practitioners in Taipei was especially productive. The visit took place between October 26 and November 4, 2007. Ivana had the opportunity to meet with representatives from the National Policy Foundation, the Institute for National Policy Research, the Institute of International Relations, the Foundation on International and Cross-Strait Studies, Taiwan Foundation for Democracy, Graduate Institute of Strategic Studies at the Tamkang University, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Ministry of National Defense.

Ms. Oklešt'ková also presented a lecture for the graduate students of International Relations at the Department of Diplomacy, Chengchi University on the topic "Czech Foreign Policy: Priorities of the 2009 EU Presidency". The students showed a high level of interest in participating in future PSSI activities as well as in student exchanges with Charles University.

PSSI BECOMES PARTNER OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND SECURITY NETWORK (ISN)

The ISN is a free public service that provides a wide range of high-quality and comprehensive products and resources to encourage the exchange of information among international relations and security professionals worldwide. The ISN works to promote a better understanding of the strategic challenges we face in today's rapidly evolving security environment. To learn more about ISN, please visit: www.isn.ethz.ch

COLLEGIATE NETWORK 2007

On June 23–July 1, 2007 PSSI organized its fifth consecutive annual Collegiate Network Geo-Strategic Journalism Course. This course is undertaken with the Intercollegiate Studies Institute (ISI), which as part of its activities created the Collegiate Network (CN). CN is now a well-established nationwide program for student editors and journalists, which provides a network of nearly 80 independent student newspapers across the U.S. Over the course of one intensive week, these student journalists and editors meet with high-level Czech and other politicians, policy practitioners, scholars, opinion leaders and journalists. By hearing from these professionals, students not only discover more about the country and its people, but also gain a deeper understanding of Central Europe.

During this year’s program, fifteen students met with representatives of People in Need and Civic Belarus, both Czech human rights organizations. They received briefings on Czech NGOs from Kristina Prunčřová and Jan Marian. PSSI Executive Director Oldřich Černý, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs Tomáš Pojar and the Ambassador of the United States Richard Graber discussed bilateral relations between the Czech Republic and the United States as well as other international issue areas. The students also met with NYU Professor and journalist Jan Urban and a US journalist living in Prague, Julie O’Shea. These young editors and correspondents likewise had a unique opportunity to meet with one of the world’s most respected radio platforms, Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty. PSSI is pleased to continue hosting this worthy undertaking with such talented young American journalists.

PSSI-MOLDOVA TRAINING SESSION

On September, 17–21, 2007 the Prague Security Studies Institute, together with the Institute for Development and Social Initiatives, “Viitorul”, in Moldova, organized a study and training visit for a group of young Moldovan experts and politicians. This visit focused on various aspects of the Czechoslovak/Czech post-1989 transformation, including the security dimension. The program was coordinated by PSSI with the generous support of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic.

PSSI VISIT FROM MOLDOVAN SECURITY COMMUNITY

On January 5–9, 2007, PSSI together with Institute for Public Policy, in Moldova, organized a program in Prague for representatives of Moldovan security community. The goal of the visit was to share both Czech successes and failures in the field of security-related post-1989 institutional reforms. The Moldovan participants met with representatives of various government ministries and other security-oriented state agencies, as well as independent experts and representatives of NGOs working in this field.

SECURITY POLICY WORKSHOP FOR KOSOVO PROVISIONAL INSTITUTIONS OF SELF-GOVERNMENT (PISG)

On September 19–20, 2007 PSSI, in cooperation with The Geneva Centre for the Democratic Control of Armed Forces (DCAF), organized a two-day workshop on the roles and responsibilities of National Security Council (NSC) for members of the Kosovo Provisional Institutions of Self-Government (PISG). The aim of the event was to offer participants a comparative overview of the duties of NSC officials and how they can most effectively coordinate the interagency process of their respective executive branches.

ABOUT PSSSI

PSSI's mission is to help build an ever-growing group of informed and security-minded policy-makers dedicated to the development of democratic institutions and values in the Czech Republic and its regional neighbors. PSSI offers programs that meet the critical requirement to equip new generations of young leaders to manage the complex, security-related challenges of the 21st century. PSSI also aims to identify and analyze foreign policy and security-related issues in the area of transatlantic relations, and to propose practical and prudent policies to address these and other security challenges.

To fulfill its mission, PSSI undertakes to organize a variety of activities under its Security Scholars Program; Program of Atlantic Security Studies; Corporate Council Program; and Outreach Program.
